Integrating Landscapes: Agroforestry for Biodiversity Conservation and Food Sovereignty

Series: Advances in Agroforestry

- Holistic, multidisciplinary perspective, encompassing factors and variables from multiple disciplines
- Attractive to professionals and students in a variety of fields related to agriculture, rural development, restoration, environmental management, ecology, agroecology
- Discusses current challenges faced today by agroforestry researchers and practitioners and proposes innovative approaches to tackle them
- Emphasis on Latin America, North America with case studies from other parts of the world
- Contributors are an assemblage of researchers, academicians and practitioners from agroforestry, environmental management and related fields who approach the issues from unique perspectives

Agroforestry systems (AFS) are becoming increasingly relevant worldwide as society has come to recognize their multiple roles and services: biodiversity conservation, carbon sequestration, adaptation and mitigation of climate change, restoration of degraded ecosystems, and tools for rural development. This book summarizes advances in agroforestry research and practice and raises questions as to the effectiveness of AFS to solve the development and environmental challenges the world presents us today. Currently AFS are considered to be a land use that can achieve a compromise among productive and environmental functions. Apparently, AFS can play a significant role in rural development even in the most challenging socioeconomic and ecological conditions, but still there is a lot of work to do to reach these goals.
